(AP) -- The 29th annual Sunbelt Agricultural Exposition begins tomorrow with demonstrations of the latest farm equipment, goat and horse shows and seminars.

The three-day expo will attract 1,200 exhibitors and an estimated 100,000 visitors to a 700-acre complex at Moultrie in south Georgia. Executive director Chip Blalock says new technology to be shown includes satellite-steered cotton pickers and trucks that use wood chips as fuel. Kentucky will be recognized for its thoroughbred horses and row crops, such as tobacco. Loretta Lyons, a Kentucky farmer, is the first woman among state farmers competing to become Swisher Sweets-Sunbelt Expo Farmer of the year.

Alabama Farmer of the Year Lamar Dewberry, a forester, also is among the 10 farmers competing.
